Unit-III

- 3. Write a Precis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title : 10

All who have gone before you have submitted to the strength of death. All who have come after you shall undergo the same fate. The great and the good, the prince and the peasant, the renowned and the obscure all travels the same road that leads to the grave. Every day thousands die, can this be deemed as a big calamity, but this is an event which is a natural law, whereby leaves fall in autumn, fruits drop on the ground when ripe.

(3)

The pain of death cannot be too long, when compared to other sorrow. The pomp of death is more terrifying than death itself. It is the weakness of our imagination that rouses passion in our mind that has been unable to overcome the fear of the death. Honour has defied death, love despised it, shame has rushed to it, revenge has degraded it, grief has a thousand times wished for its approach. It is not strange that reason and virtue cannot give strength to overcome the fear of death. It is the final epitome of life.

Unit-IV

4. (a) Read the following passage and answer the questions given at the end :

There are hundreds of superstitions which survive in various parts of the country, and the study of them is rather amusing. We are told, for example, that it is unlucky to point to the new moon or to look at it through glass, but if we now nine times to it we shall have a lucky month.

Nearly all superstitions are concerned with luck. Good luck is associated with black cats, horse shoes, the finding of a pin, the three penny hit in the Christmas pudding, the old shoe flung at a wedding party and the dark men, who is the first
